SYNOPSIS

Have you ever wondered what chocolate feels like? Or what is the world's most expensive chocolate? Or how many M&M's it takes to circle the earth? Then take a bite out of CHOCOLATE CONFIDENTIAL.

CHOCOLATE CONFIDENTIAL is a sensuous, snappy and delicious journey into the world of bars and bon bons. We take you behind closed doors of major chocolate corporations and master chocolatiers.

Take a guided chocolate tour of Paris with chef David Leibovitz. Visit Patrick Roger, a roguish, motorcycle riding chocolatier who likens working with chocolate to making love.

Meet Chloé Doutre-Roussel, cocoa connoisseur and devoted missionary. Follow her as she tracks down the mystery of chocolate, traveling to the Dominican Republic where some of the best cocoa beans in the world are grown.

Go behind the scenes into the secretive Mars factory and watch millions of M & M's roll off the assembly line. Join the throngs of tourists flocking to Hershey, Pennsylvania, the town that calls itself the "Sweetest Place of Earth".

Chocolate is a food shrouded in myth and mystery. From the moment it touches the tongue your entire mouth is coated in melted sweet bliss. It is the world's most complex food and scientists have no idea how to replicate it.

CHOCOLATE CONFIDENTIAL will separate the facts from the myths. Do you get pimples from chocolate? Do you get fat from chocolate? And what about that age old question – do women really prefer chocolate over sex? All that and more on CHOCOLATE CONFIDENTIAL, the secrets beneath the wrapper.
